THE LOST LETTER.

Ours was a quaint old church, built of rough stone, with a peaked roof and an odd little steeple, where a set of sweet bells hung. It had the queerest little organ-gallery, with balustrades about which cherubims seemed to flutter, and a bird's nest of a pulpit hung in mid air. Once the French Huguenots who settled New Rochelle had worshipped there, but it was an Episcopal church now, and most of the residents belonged to it. Not that they always attended regularly; for, once, it was said, driven to madness by the beggarly array of empty pews, the Rev. Elias Danbury had begun his sermon thus: "Dearly beloved Mr. and Mrs. Narroway and Mr. Parmelyea," —addressing the only members present who were wide awake. But that was of a rainy day, and before the organ came—the new organ, bright and loud of voice, which wicked people, not to be tempted out by sermons, came to hear. When this became an attraction, and good Mr. Hess, our German organist had formed a choir, there was, on pleasant mornings, quite a display of best bonnets within, and of wagons, gigs and saddle-horses without. Then would hunch-backed Timothy Brown, parish clerk and cordwainer, tiptoe during service time, and save himself trouble by putting boots and shoes, made or mended through the week, under the seats of his customers' wagons, that they might take them home themselves; and returning, drop asleep until charitably awakened by the head of the house of Adair, occupying the front pew, who poked at him across pews with umbrella or walking stick, and caused him to start to consciousness with a sonorous "Amen" generally absurdly out of place, but sometimes quite as ridiculously in the nick of time.

I sang in the church choir, and when it was formed I may have been seventeen.

One October day, the last of the month, which chanced to fall on a Thursday, we went, according to custom, to practice some new music at the church. Early as it was, it was Christmas music, for we intended to make a grand display of our acquirements on that day, when the church was full of strangers. And I suppose no one had a thought but on Christmas day old Mr. Hess would sit at the organ, and we fill each a place behind the red curtain of the choir. That afternoon I stopped for Abby Adair, and we walked over together. She had the soprano voice, I sang contralto. There were maple leaves thick about the church, and quite a red carpet of them rustled under our feet. Some had blown in the church itself, and the hunch-backed clerk was hobbling about, picking them up.

"You are the first, this time," he said.

"The first—then Mr. Hess has not come yet?"

"Ah! he's come, Miss Sophy; warrant him for that. The first lady, I meant. But he's not playing."

We ran up the steps of the organ gallery, Abby first. At the head of them she paused and I—neither of us kn[illegible]—stood still also. The loft, just coming from such a bright October sunlight, was dark, and we could not quite make out what Mr. Hess was doing. He was on his knees, his head bent down.

"Is he praying?" whispered Abby.

We crept forward a step. I said, "Mr. Hess." There was no answer. I said it louder. No answer still. Then Abby and I instead of going forward, ran back and screamed together, and brought old Timothy from the aisles below.

Our poor organist knelt there dead!

We fancied he must have felt death stealing over him, and knelt down to pray. There was a sweet smile on his face, and one hand was on his bosom clutching a locket, in which lay coiled a tress of flaxen hair. We buried it with him, for we all felt it must be some relic of the past life of which we knew nothing. After that the organ stood dumb, and we missed the dear old German face and the kindly voice with its foreign accent, which we knew so well, and without him we had not heart to sing, not even at Christmas time.

In the spring, when violets were on his grave, we heard that a new organist had been engaged, and that the Thursday and Saturday afternoon instruction was to commence, and the choir came together once more in the church. The old minister was there, and with him a gentleman who looked about thirty years old. He had a fine, tall figure, an olive complexion, and eyes never seen save when the complexion is pure olive; Spanish eyes shaded by jet-black lashes. When he stepped forward to speak to us, I saw that he was very slightly lame. Kind old Mr. Danbury introduced us in an impromptu sermon. Under the head of "firstly," he informed our organist that ours was the most amiable of choirs, to which hitherto all those dissensions peculiar to such institutions had been utterly unknown. Secondly, he let us know that Mr. Andrew Hudson did us a favor by coming among us, and that he was a wondrous organist. Thirdly, he hoped our amity would continue and increase if possible; and then sat down, with his face beaming with smiles, to listen to our first afternoon's performance.

At the first touch we knew that Mr. Hudson was master of the instrument, but whether we should like him personally was another question. I thought him very handsome; Abby Adair did not—and he was certainly grave and silent to a fault.

We were so accustomed to good Mr. Hess, and his fatherly interest in each and all of us, that even a genial stranger would have seemed very different—this gentleman particularly so, from his peculiar manner.

But I walked home that evening with our pastor, and on the way he told quite a romantic story of our new organist. How at twenty he had saved a child from being crushed by the heavy wheels of a wagon driven by a drunken man, and, in the act, been so injured that it was for a time thought he would never walk again except on crutches. How, at this the girl he loved—a giddy butterfly, with neither heart or soul—had jilted him, and married some one else; and how, even whilst suffering great agony at intervals, the young man began to study music as a profession, by which in his crippled state he could support his mother and himself.

"He had genius, and succeeded wonderfully," continued the clergyman; "and God has given him health and strength again almost miraculously—and as for the girl, I believe but for those five long years which kept him a prisoner in his room and gave him so much time to think, he would have quite forgotten her. And sometimes I believe, and his old mother also, that if he ever meets another woman he can love, he will become himself, light-hearted self again."

"Pretty, very pretty," he muttered. "Golden hair and blue eyes—adored just as she was—and a good sweet girl—" Then with a start and newly awakened look—"There is the parsonage, Sophy; won't you come in and see Mrs. Danbury."

But I was busy that night and could not. Besides, I wanted to think. The new organist was a different person already in my eyes. I felt sorry for him and indignant with the girl [illegible] that he was no longer very lame—as though I had known him all my life; and I hoped that he would meet some new true love. Abby Adair!—no she could not understand him. Ruth Maitland or Hess Blauvelt?—nay, each one had a suitor.

And then, being at home, I went to the glass and looked at Sophy Norroway!

Did Mr. Danbury mean me? I had golden hair and blue eyes. Perhaps I was pretty; and I was sure that if I had been that girl I never, never—

The folly of my thoughts burst upon me—I laughed aloud. Silly, silly girl! I cared nothing for that dark, sad stranger; and he had not even looked at me.

Not then; but I could not say the same afterward. There came a time when, lift my eyes when I would, I saw his bent upon me. Not an impertinent stare; a quiet, earnest look, as though he were trying to read me through. He used to listen when I spoke to others, though he very seldom conversed with me; and once I fancied he changed my seat under some pretence to have me where he could see me better. At last, as I sat sewing at home one day near the window, I lifted my eyes and saw him coming up the garden walk.

We talked that day. Shy people can only really converse en tete-a-tete. And when he went away I knew him and liked him.

The first time I ever saw him smile was when he looked back at the door to say a last word or two.

It was a very sweet smile, brimful of kindness.

I was just eighteen, he nearly thirty. I fell in love with him the soon[illegible] Yes, the secret is out. At [illegible] half a dozen of those lo[illegible] loved him fondly. I [illegible] could not help [illegible] any[illegible] [illegible] days of [illegible] whenever [illegible] all evening, with grandpa asleep in his easy chair, I heard coming up the path that well-known step, with the little halt it had not quite lost yet, my heart began to beat and my cheek to flush.

"Oh, I loved him so! I loved him so!—Words cannot tell how well I loved.

So, in those lonely days at home, when I had little to do but think, I built castles in the air, womanly castles, with his face in every scene, and almost without knowing it I was waiting for him to ask me to be his wife.

I was quite my own mistress, old grandpa would never say nay, and he loved Andrew almost as well as I did, and grandpa always humored me.

The happiest memories of my life are of that choir in the dim old church. Some day I may be old and blind, and deaf to outward things, but I shall always be able to see that organ. The olive face and dusky Spanish eyes bent over the music, and the golden sunshine falling over the sweet picture through the narrow window, overhead, and burnishing the glimmering organ and the waves of jet-black hair. I shall always, until earthly music is drowned by that of heaven, hear Andrew Hudson playing as he played in those happy hours.

One Thursday I went earlier than usual, to find only the clerk in the church nailing down new carpets on the aisles. As I paused to look at them he put his hand in his pocket. "A letter for you," he said, and stretched toward me a little missive white and spotless, with one drop of green wax in its midst.

We girls had a sentimental habit of writing notes, and this was nothing new. I took it in my hand and carelessly slipped it in my pocket to read at home. I had seen a form I knew moving among the gravestones in the church-yard, and could think of nothing else.

Just then the clerk, flinging away a bit of old carpet, called me.

"See, miss Sophy, what a crack! They'll be sorry they don't heed me about this floor sometime."

There, just at the foot of the stairs leading to the gallery where the singers sat, was indeed a crack, wide and deep, leaving full four inches between the floor and the lower step at the corner.

"The floor is settling, Miss," said he.—"The church is getting old, you see; I reckon it'll last my time, though," and he hammered away furiously, making such a racket that neither of us heard any one approaching until a voice cried:

"Ah! new carpets. The church will be smart next Sunday."

It was Andrew Hudson. He stood looking down upon us with his great eyes.

"Not before we need 'em, sir," said Timothy. "But what's the use o' carpets with floors like these wearing 'em out? Beg pardon—want to pass, sir?"

Andrew gave me a look. It said, "Come." I felt my cheek flushing. I longed to hear him say that he loved me, and yet the fancy that he might be going to speak to me now frightened me.

"I have a note I ought to read," I said, taking it from my pocket.

"No matter; let the note alone; read it at home. Come sit in the gallery with me until the rest come."

He said it in such a pleading whisper, under cover of the old clerk's hammering, that I could not refuse. We went up together, I not daring to look at him. There was a pile of new music on the stand, and in my confusion I sought refuge in that. As I bent over the pages he bent over me, and all in a moment he had caught me about the waist and kissed me. Such a kiss, I feel it yet burning on my forehead.

I was not angry. I will not tell a falsehood, I was glad; but just then Abby Adair's laugh came ringing up the gallery stairs, and I wrenched myself away from him. In a moment she was with us, and half a dozen more followed, and we were not alone again that day. How many mistakes I made in my music with the memory of that kiss driving away every other thought from my mind, I'm afraid to tell.

That evening I watched and waited for Andrew at home. I felt sure he would come—sure that he would speak at last; but though I listened all the evening, I did not hear his step upon the path. At last I went to bed, feeling sad and disappointed, and forgetting all about the little note until I was fairly undressed. Then I looked in the pocket of the dress I had taken off for it. It was not there. It was such a singular thing that it should be gone that I suddenly became interested. I wrapped myself in a shawl and went all over the house with a candle, but in vain. How I had lost the note I could not guess, but it was lost undoubtedly, and somehow the loss began to trouble me, unimportant as I believed the epistle must be.

Well, my trouble began, that night. Andrew Hudson never came near the house, and when Saturday afternoon came I went to the church to practice, feeling sure I should hear he was ill; but there he sat at the organ, and never so much as looked at me when I came in. When he had occasion to speak to me it was in an altered voice, and there were great rings about his dark eyes which made them look hollow.

"What could it all mean; was he ill or angry with me?" I longed to ask him.

But he gave me no opportunity. As soon as the hour was over he hastened away, saying something about an engagement.

I looked over the balustrade after him and saw him descending the stairs very slowly, with a spiritless look upon his face, that brought tears to my eyes.

Why did he look so? He had been happy and bright-eyed and eager when we last met! He had kissed me then.

I asked these questions of myself a thousand times, but found no answer. He never gave me one. Week after week passed and he did not come near our house. Time after time I sang in the choir, and he never even spoke to me; and the troubled look was ever on his face, and he had grown older in this short space of time.

To love him so and be so utterly seperated from him, even when I could have touched him with my hand. To feel to my heart's core the coldness of his look and tone when he was forced to speak to me. Oh my heart was wrung in those days. It ached as young hearts only can ache, and the worst was, it was a grief I could share with no one. So finding there was no explanation coming, I left the choir. I had a cold, and my voice was weak. There was a real reason to give, and I gave it. And Emily Otis took my place, and I sat on the Sabbath between grandpa and grandma in the old church below. I could hear him there, but I need not see him.

I think grandma guessed something was wrong. But she thought me so [illegible] she could hardly think of any serious [illegible] for me yet.

A week after I had left the choir the organ was dumb again. Andrew Hudson's engagement had expired, and he refused to renew it.

He left New Rochelle without ever bidding me good bye. I never knew how much was left in my heart until I heard that he was gone.

That day I stayed in my own room. And ill enough I really was, Heaven knows.

There's no ailment of the body like that of the heart. Grandma's pills and potions I flung out of the window by stealth into the flower-beds.

The next day I dressed myself and went down to breakfast. As I stood before the glass I said to myself: "Sophy Norroway, the time has come when you must play the woman. The only man you ever loved or ever can love has no love for you, that is certain; and though you were not to blame at first, for he gave you cause to think that he was fond of you, you would be to blame to keep that love in your heart. Crush it, or, if you don't crush it, hide it. Look as well and be as merry as you can, and let no one have cause to point at you and say, 'Sophy Norroway was disappointed in love, and that is why she never married,' when you are the lonely old maid you must live to be." For you see I had no thought of liking any one else. I knew that could never happen.

Well, I fought with myself after that. I battled down the tears. I forced myself to pay visits and to have my friends about me. I would not cry even when alone. But do all I would, there was the heart ache still. The fox gnawed at my bosom, though I kept the mantle over it.

Sometimes I think it almost a pity that a woman should ever love. For we can be sure of nothing in this world, and life is worthless to one of us if the man she loves dies or, forsakes her. A man can love twenty women, but a woman never truly loves more than one man. I used to wish often and often that I had never met Andrew Hudson.

Fighting down the love it was now wrong to cherish, and trying to do my duty, and, I humbly hope, doing it in some measure, I lived through the long years. At the end of the tenth grandpa died, and grandma followed him in a few months.

"I couldn't live without him," she said. "You see we'd been together these fifty years husband and I." And those were the last words I ever heard her speak; for an hour after that she died, with her cheek lying softly in her hand like that of a sleeping babe.

I could not grieve for them—it seemed so selfish. But I was all alone in the world. I lived alone in the old house but for one servant, and sat alone in the pew with grandma's name on the back, where it had been for fifty years. I heard the new organist—a lady—play, and the choir sing, and thought, despite myself, of the hands which had once touched the keys.

There were many changes in the church. Old Mr. Danbury had been gathered to his fathers. The girls who had sung with me were mostly married, as I might have been had I chosen; but I would give no man a heart with another's name graven on it, and had said "no" to more than one who would have made my lonely life pleasanter. I was nearly thirty, and the young folks called me an "old maid."

I knew, but I was well content, for none had found my secret out.

My thirtieth birthday fell on the first Sunday of October. It was eleven years since the first Sabbath Andrew Hudson had played upon that organ to which I listened dreamily as Miss Philips played (as she styled it) the people in—a strain he had been fond of; and as I listened the old memories swept over me thick and fast. I bent my head upon the front of my pew, and prayed that God might bless the man I loved wherever he might be; for, after all those years, and my long battle with myself, there was no change in my love.

When I lifted my head a stranger was passing up the aisle. A man of forty, with an olive skin and Spanish eyes—with crisp black hair flecked with silver, and falling from the crown—tall, finely formed, but walking with a slight limp—Andrew Hudson, ten years older than when I had last seen him, but still Andrew Hudson.

I never hoped to look upon him again with living eyes. I feasted them now. I was not quite sure I could live through that hour. The suppressed agitation seemed to be killing me, yet the very sight of him was joy. He sat above me in the side aisle, and could not see me without turning his head.

Even then, with my mourning veil down, he might not know me, and I could hardly be the same at thirty I was at eighteen.

I looked and looked, great tears swelling into my eyes. I was not conscious of anything going on about me. I only knew I saw Andrew.

Suddenly there was the sound of a crash, a rumbling, shaking of the church and screams from female voices. The whole congregation started to their feet at once and pushed doorward; the old clerk trying his utmost to stop them.

"If there's any danger at all," he made them hear at last, "it is just by the door. The floor has given away. I've said it would these twenty years."

At that the crowd huddled back and formed themselves at a stand still.

Just then a hand touched my shoulder. A voice said:

"Do not be alarmed, Miss Norroway. The church will not tumble about us yet. The only danger is a rush over the weak spot of the floor."

It was Andrew's voice, and I did not dare to look at him.

I stood quite still. Some of the bolder ones had leaped the chasm; others had clambered through the open windows. The ladies were being handed over by means of an extemporaneous bridge, and the place was almost empty.

The new clergyman had come down from the pulpit, and stood with his wife on his arm, very near me. The clerk and Deacon Blauvelt peered into the aperture.

"The beams have been dry-rotting a long time," said the latter. "One of 'em is in two, and the d[illegible] b[illegible], there's a letter!"

He interrupted himself by kneeling down and thrusting his arm into the chasm. There on the ledge, formed by the cellar wall, rested a letter—dirty, cobweb-covered, but with the seal unbroken.

"Miss—Sophy—Narroway," he read slowly "why Sophy, that's yours!"

I saw Andrew Hudson start violently and turn his eyes upon me with a new look in them, and I stretched out my hand. How it trembled.

"An old letter," I said. "I lost one before I read it ten years ago. It must have slipped through that crack in the floor we all knew of." And I spoke calmly, though my heart was beating so that I could hear it.

I crossed the bridge with a laugh the next moment, chatted a while with the clergyman's wife, and then betook myself home. Half-way I heard a step following me—a step I knew so well. I tried to go on and could not. I paused. He gained upon me. The soft brown hand, with its rounded finger tips, caught mine.

"Miss Norroway—Sophy," he almost gasped. "Stop—listen to me—I beseech you.—Sit down—here, under these maples, and read that note—read and answer it—not as it asks you, but with a word—a smile—a look. Life seems within my grasp once more!"

He sank upon the grass under the maples, and drew me down beside him.

In a sort of a dream I broke the seal and glanced over the first words of the page before me. It bore the date of ten years before, and reads thus:

"DEAR SOPHY—"

I tried to read on but the letters danced before my eyes. I glanced at the signature and saw his name. The letter fluttered into my lap.

"Sophy," he pleaded, "read all, and answer me."

But there was no need. The truth had flashed upon me. The lost letter had been from him, asking me to be his wife, and he had taken a silence for rejection of his suit. Oh, the [illegible] years of hidden sorrow—years that had changed me from a girl to a woman, that had [illegible] silver in his ebon locks [illegible] for one careless [illegible] me.

[illegible] hand was stretched toward him. "Oh Andrew!" I cried.

"You never could have been so dear to me, had you not loved me all the while," he said.

And the next moment I was clasped to his breast, and our lips met in their first kiss.

Have I told you enough? I will not sadden the story by going back into those weary years of separation—I will not weary you with the chain of events which brought him on that day to New Rochelle and to the church porch. But I will tell you how, on one sunny morn, Queen Anne's bells in that old church steeple rang out a wedding chime, and my story ends with the hour that made me Andrew's wife.

Suitable speakers will address the people at the above places, who will be announced hereafter. Other meetings will be hereafter announced at other points in the county.

By order of the Co. Executive Com.
H. HICE, Chairman.

The Grand Mass meeting of the Republican party of the county will be held in Beaver on Wednesday Sept. 23rd. The Present understanding is that Gov. Geary, ex-Governor Curtin, Col. A. K. McClure and Hon. G. A. Grow will meet with us and address the people at that time.

Republicans, let us have a grand rally at the Court House on next Tuesday evening, (Sept. 8th.) H. BUCHER SWOPE of Clearfield county, one of the very best speakers in Pennsylvania will be here to address the people. Let every nook and corner in the Court House be filled on that evening.

There is no denying the fact that one great reason why Democrats hate Grant, is because he was the means of killing off a quarter of a million of their voters—generally known as rebels. And, on our part, we don't hesitate to add that one reason why we know Seymour is not fit for the Presidency, is because he rendered aid and comfort to those who murdered a quarter of a million of our citizens—our Union voters.

Our friends in Ohio township had a rousing meeting at Fairview on last Tuesday evening. The whole country turned out, including the wide-awake company and the drum corps from Beaver. Speeches were delivered by Messrs. Rutan, Harrah and Cook, after which the meeting gave three cheers for Grant, Colfax and Peace and then adjourned. Ohio township is on the alert, and will have her full vote out in October.

A correspondent writing to the N. Y. Tribune from Niagara Falls, says: "You may be interested to hear that, in our town, which polls about five hundred votes, there were over sixty voters who intended to vote for Mr. Chase had he been nominated by the New York Convention, but have decided to vote for Grant and Colfax since the nomination of Seymour. Quite a number of them were War Democrats. They will not touch anything tinged with copper.

"Brick" Pomeroy's paper in New York appears to be the entering wedge for a split in the Democratic party of that city. The silver-tongued, kid-gloved and aristocratic bondholders there will have nothing to do with "Brick" or his paper, and although the latter has been in existence for several weeks, the World has not yet recognized its existence and probably never will. "Brick" does not like this "snubbing" process, and intimates "war to the knife and the knife to the hilt" in due course of time.

Look at this official table of relief afforded you by a Republican Congress from the taxation rendered necessary by the rebellion of the Democratic party in 1860:

Taxes repealed by act of July 13, 1866.....$60,000,000
  "      "      "  "  "  Mar. 2, 1867......40,000,000
  "      "      "  "  "  Feb. 3, 1868......23,760,000
  "      "      "  "  "  Mar. 31, 1868.....44,500,000
  "      "      "  "  "  July 20, 1868....110,000,000

Total tax taken off the people in three years..................................$278,260,000

Will you have Grant, Colfax and Peace, and let this reduction of taxes go on; or Seymour, Blair and War, and an increase of debt?

The election of Seymour means war. If he is chosen President there can be no doubt but that the reconstructed Governments will be overturned at the point of the bayonet if need be. We have Blair's word for it. The attempt to overturn them will cause a negro war—and justly. What then? We will be plunged into another vortex of strife, worse even than that from which we have escaped. Elect Grant, and the disappointed Rebels will yield to the decision of the loyal North, and Reconstruction, now so auspiciously progressing, will be happily completed. Which shall it be—peace or war?

One of the best replies we have noticed in the canvass is that of the Hon. John A. Bingham, of Ohio, who, while speaking at a Republican meeting in Bangor, Maine, was insulted by a Copperhead, who cried out, "How about Mrs. Surratt?" Mr. Bingham instantly responded:

How, about her? Go and consult the records of the court that tried and convicted her. Go and ask Gen. Hancock, who issued the order for her execution in spite of a writ of habeas corpus which had been served upon him; and if you are still unsatisfied, go and ask that apostate President, Andrew Johnson, why he refused a pardon after a petition had been sent him signed by every member but one of the court who tried her, and drawn up in the handwriting of the man you seek to insult.

Brick Pomeroy's La Crosse Democrat says:

Grant is made of the right stuff for a Republican President. He is a drunkard; a butcher of men; a seeker after spoils; the great national murderer; a betrayer; a fool.

The Hon. G. H. Pendleton is of a different opinion. In his recent speech at Bangor he bore manly tribute to the Republican candidates. We quote:

I shall not disparage the ability or character of our opponents. I would not, if I could, pluck one leaf from the laurels of Gen. Grant. Whatever may be his ability as a soldier he has stood the test of success, and, so far as I have known, he has borne himself with moderation and magnanimity in his high office. I have known Mr. Colfax well for many years. I have seen him in possession of great power. He is an amiable and estimable gentleman, and would perform with dignity the duties of the high office to which he aspires.

The Democracy of our Congressional district are just now doing a fearful amount of boasting. They affect to believe that Crawford, their candidate for Congress will be elected, and when pressed to know how that result is to be brought about, they give us these figures in the way of majorities in the respective counties:

| | Crawford. | | Donley. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Beaver | | | 400 maj. |
| Lawrence | | | 1600 " |
| Washington | 500 maj. | | |
| Greene | 2500 " | | |
| | 3000 | | 2000 |
| | | 3000 | |
| | | 2000 | |
| Maj. for Crawford in the dist. | | 1000 | |

These are the Democratic figures on the Congressional result. Now look at ours, and after the October election see if we are not nearer the mark than our Democratic prophets:

| | Crawford. | | Donley. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Beaver | | | 1000 maj. |
| Lawrence | | | 1900 " |
| Washington | | | 200 " |
| Greene | 1600 maj. | | |
| | 1600 | | 3100 |
| | | 3100 | |
| | | 1600 | |
| Maj. for Donley in dist. | | 1500 | |

The leaders of the Democracy of this county made an energetic attempt last Thursday to rally their forces at New Brighton. Posters were sent in every direction, runners were called into requisition, and the unterrified were besought with all the appliances conceivable to attend at that time. They were informed that unless they rallied and made a favorable demonstration on that day, their opponents would take advantage of the circumstance, and herald it throughout the country that the Democracy of Beaver county were disheartened and already gave up the fight. Representations of this character drew together a pretty fair crowd of people at New Brighton, but not over one-half the number that were expected. Indeed we are informed by persons present, and in whose opinions we have the utmost confidence, that the crowd, estimating men, women and children, did not exceed twenty-five hundred persons. Of course a large number of these were Republicans, who were attracted thither only to hear what the Ku Klux speakers had to say. The "rally" therefore amounted to nothing in point of numbers, and as to enthusiasm, the article was nowhere to be found.

The Democracy of Raccoon and Greene townships are just now endeavoring to "play a little game," which no doubt, they believe to be sharp. Two of the Poor House paupers hail from these townships. They have always been full-blooded copps. Recently they have ran away from the Poor House, and they have no hesitation in telling others that they purpose staying away until after the election, when they intend returning to their old quarters, to be fed and clothed at the public expense. There is no doubt but this enterprise has been mapped out for them by the Democracy of their respective townships, and our purpose now is to call the attention of the election officers to the matter, so that when these paupers come to offer their votes at the October election, they will know exactly what their legal status is, and what disposition the law requires to be made of their ballots. They were legally and regularly sent to the Poor House by official authority, and have never been discharged therefrom. They are at liberty now and roaming through the country without any one's consent save their own. Officers of Raccoon and Greene townships! sift the law in regard to the right of these persons to vote. If they are legally entitled to the ballot let them have it, but if not see that they do not get it.

Our friends must go to work and keep at work, and then their work will be done in the right way and with the right results. The following suggestions deserve the attention of every Republican:

1. Form a Grant Club at once in every township, with an independent working organization in each election district.

2. Get the name of every Grant and Colfax voter in that district and have him a member of the Club, if possible.

3. Next, record the name of every other voter in said district, with every one entitled to become or to be made a voter before November 3d.

4. See that every one who will read Republican papers is provided with at least one good one.

5. Make arrangements that will render the polling of an illegal vote in that district morally impossible.

6. Take care that—no matter what may be the weather—every Grant voter in that district shall be at the polls before noon of election day, and shall vote as early as may be possible.

7. Look out for the undecided or wavering, that they vote for us so far as may be.

Friends! such is the meaning of work. Are you already about it.

If anybody has forgotten Mr. Robert Ould the Rebel Commissioner for the exchange of prisoners, it is not the fault of that gentleman himself, for he has lost no opportunity of keeping his name and his former functions before the public. The mission which he seems to have chosen since the close of the war is that of shifting the burden of responsibility for the sufferings of Union prisoners in the South from the shoulders of the Confederate authorities, where it belongs, to the officers of our own Government, who never relaxed their efforts to secure the liberation of our captive soldiers by a fair exchange. It will be remembered that he was summoned as a witness on the Wirz trial, and his testimony, had it been given on that occasion, might have settled the question forever; but unfortunately the Court ruled it irrelevant, and he was not examined. Since then he has been perpetually charging the blame upon one person after another according as the fancy took him. First he indicted Mr. Lincoln's Administration in the lump. Then he fixed the fault upon Secretary Stanton. Next he turned upon Gen. Butler, and the other day, in a letter to The National Intelligencer, he made out Gen. Grant to be the guilty man. Somebody hereupon has opportunely called to mind a letter of Mr. Ould's to the Rebel Gen. Winder, which has repeatedly been published, and proves conclusively that the Confederate proffers of exchange were honestly accepted by our Government, and that while we returned Southern prisoners in health and strength we received in their place unfortunate beings whom cruelty and starvation had reduced almost to the door of death. The letter was written from City Point while the exchange was in progress, and is well worth reprinting. It runs as follows:

SIR: A flag-of-truce boat has arrived with 350 political prisoners, Gen. Barrow and several other prominent men among them.

I wish you to send me at 4 o'clock, Wednesday morning, all the military prisoners (except officers) and all the political prisoners you have. If any of the political prisoners have on hand proof enough to convict them of being spies, or having committed other offenses which should subject them to punishment, so state opposite their names. Also state whether you think, under all the circumstances, they should be released.

The arrangement I have made works largely in our favor. We get rid of a set of miserable wretches, and receive some of the best material I ever saw.

ROBERT OULD, Agent of Exchange.

Brig.-Gen. Winder.

The Democratic candidate for Congress for this District, Mr. Crawford, appears, from all we can learn, to have a very "hard row to hoe." His friends claim him to be one of the "most eloquent men of Western Pennsylvania," but singularly enough his eloquence is so unappreciable in this county that but few attend his meetings or show a desire to be enlightened or benefitted by his oratory. During the past week he has spoken several times in this county, and at none of his meetings have his audiences amounted to anything but a mere handful of men. At Fairview, we are informed, but twenty-four persons were present, and these were so unenthusiastic as to beget the impression in the minds of those who were but a few rods away that Mr. Crawford and his friends had left in disgust before the hour for the meeting arrived. At Darlington his success was but little better. At Industry about one hundred persons, including a good sprinkling of Republicans, were on the ground. At Hookstown the crowd was small, and so at all of his appointments on the south side of the river. The pole-raising in New Brighton on last Thursday attracted more of a multitude than he had met in the county before, and that audience was only about as large as some of our ordinary club meetings in this place. Mr. O. has doubtless made several political investments in his time, but we venture that this raid of his into Beaver county will profit him about as little as any one he has ever made

Soldiers, Read.

Who apologized for the wholesale starvation of 14,000 Union prisoners at Andersonville?

The Democratic party, by endeavoring to blame General Grant for that horrible affair.

Who tried to excuse the rebellion?

The Democratic party, by endeavoring to make out that the North inaugurated the rebellion.

Who apologized for the horrible atrocities committed by the "friends" of Governor Seymour during the great Copperhead riot in New York City.

The Democratic party, by trying to show that the government was to blame in not exempting New York city from the draft, and by nominating Gov. Seymour for the Presidency.

Who apologized for the burrying alive of Union prisoners at Fort Pillow?

The Democratic party, by admitting General Forrest as a delegate to their Convention.

Who apologized for the burning of the city of Columbia, South Carolina?

The Democratic party, by admitting that arch incendiary, Gen. Wade Hampton, to the same Convention.

Who apologized for the innumerable murders of Union men at the South by the Ku Klux Klan?

The Democratic party, by saying that the Ku Klux Klan are oppressed by the Government.

Who apologized for the assassination of Lincoln?

The Democratic party, by giving Brick Pomeroy, the eulogist of Wilkes Booth, the largest subscription list of any Copperhead paper in the country.

Who apologized for the destruction of American commerce by the pirate Semmes?

The Democratic party, by acknowledging him to be one of their leaders.

Who apologized for the course of that notorious Copperhead traitor Vallandigham?

The Democratic party, by nominating him for Governor in 1863.

Why is the Democratic party emphatically the friend of the rebels?

Because its leaders are eternally trying to excuse the course of the rebels in warring against the Union, firing on the old flag, starving Union prisoners, murdering loyal men, exalting rebel generals, villifying and slandering loyal soldiers like Generals Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, Thomas, Sickles, Meade and their brave boys in blue, by calling them Lincoln's hirelings.

Our Republican friends of Darlington township opened the campaign in their locality on last Wednesday evening. Capt. G. L. Eberhart, of New Brighton, was the speaker of the hour, and entertained his audience in a very creditable manner. The meeting was presided over by Samuel Caughey, Esq. The Republicans of Darlington township are wide-awake, and notwithstanding the influx of a large number of miners of the Democratic persuasion, will be able to hold their own at the fall elections. A grand rally of Republicans will again take place in Darlington on next Thursday evening. A torchlight procession will be one of the attractions at that time. Good speakers will also be on the ground. Let them have a large audience.

The Republican meeting at the Court House on last Saturday evening was an excellent one. W. C. Moreland Esq of Pittsburgh delivered a very able and effective speech to a densely packed court house. Prof. Pope, a fine singer, also from Pittsburgh, favored the audience with a number of campaign songs. It is needless to say that they were favorably received by the large audience present.

INTERVIEW WITH GENERAL LONGSTREET.

Gen. Grant His Candidate for the Presidency.

Yesterday's chieftain of the late Rebellion, Gen. James Longstreet, arrived in New York. Since the war he accepted the situation and has used his influence to counsel and guide his people and to lead them safely back to an enduring peace. Yesterday evening a reporter of THE TRIBUNE called upon the General at the New York Hotel. Imagine seated at a table a tall, well-built man in suit of black. The face is a kindly, pleasant one, the beard is sandy and grizzled and the cheeks are flushed. The forehead is high, and the eyes are grey and soft in expression. The mouth squarely set denotes decision, and there is that quiet resolute air about him that reminded one of Gen. Grant, whom he strongly resembles in looks and manner. Although suffering from an attack of fever he bore himself resolutely above pain, and after dinner conversed freely upon affairs in the Southern States. As a portion of the conversation bears directly upon the coming campaign I give it in full.

Reporter—Do you think we will have better days in the Southern States?

Gen. Longstreet—Assuredly. The cotton crop has been very large this year, and we will soon have capital of our own to work upon.

Rep.—Suppose Seymour is elected, do you think we will have another war?

Gen. L.—I cannot say as to that, but I believe that if he is elected it will open all those old issues, and we will have trouble; but I don't think he will be elected.

Rep.—What do you think of Grant?

Gen. L.—He is my man. I believe he is a fair man. I met him at West Point. I think he is above meanness. His silence is grand.

Rep.—There is one thing I would like to ask. It is in regard to the negro.

Gen. L.—(smiling)—I will tell you all I know.

Rep.—Will he keep his contracts in regard to labor?

Gen. L.—I can relate my own experience. My men have worked well. They like to have a white man come out in the field and tell them what to do. There was always a class of lazy men who would sit in their houses and give their orders. Those men deserve to have trouble.

Rep.—And in regard to jury trials—I mean negroes upon a jury bench?

Gen. L.—In some cases that is bad—for instance, where an action involves an account. Negroes generally are ignorant upon intricate matters of business. But, if a district is disposed to do right with them, the jury may be divided—white and black. They (the negroes) soon learn, and appreciate the position.

Rep.—About negro supremacy?

Gen. L.—Ah, that can never be; it is silly to think of it. They can be stronger than they are to-day, and the whites of the South know it, but they are misled by the politicians.

Rep.—In regard to the acts of Reconstruction?

Gen. L.—I advise my friends to accept them and come in to the Union and try to bring about peace, and prosperity. I told the people of Alabama, if they would not be guided by the politicians they would come out all right.

Rep.—And you think it will come out all right?

Gen. L.—I do; the crops are large. The cotton crop is worth $200,000,000. That is a step toward bringing about the desired result. Chase was my man. I think if nominated he could have been elected, and the Southern people would rally about him without knowing it; I cannot vote for Seymour; but any way, I think good times are not far distant.

Vallandigham A Rebel Agent.

Capt. Francis Johns, commander of the steamer Harriet Pinckney, in which Vallandigham ran the blockade after he was sent south for disloyalty, has made an affidavit in which he states that Vallandigham, whom the Ohio Democrats have just nominated for Congress, was a party to a Confederate plot to make a diversion at the North in favor of Gen. Lee's army. Capt. Johns says:

> "I was hurriedly dispatched by Major Norman S. Walker, the Confederate Agent there, on to Halifax, to convey a certain number of Confederates then at Bermuda, some 28 or 30 in all, most of them officers of various ranks, among whom I remember the undermentioned: C. L. Vallandigham, Col. Theburn, Col. Pringle, Col. Black, Col. Sweeney, Capt. Hartstein, Capt. Styles. The names of others I am at present unable to state, as there was no list of passengers made or allowed to be made. Before setting out I had several conversations with Major Walker, relative to this expedition. He stated definitely and positively that it was a secret mission organized at Richmond which Vallandigham was at the head of; that they were to have mob meetings in the cities of Boston and New-York to create a diversion in favor of Gen. Lee, and the Southern army then about to invade the North. I was expressly directed by Major Walker to proceed without a moment's delay, as Mr. Vallandigham and the others were bound to be in Boston and New York before the 4th of July, the day on which the mob meetings were to take place in those cities. So hurriedly was I dispatched, that I was obliged to take on with me to Halifax two-thirds of my cargo, consisting of rifles, saltpeter, and various munitions of war, which I had not time to discharge. During the passage the objects of the expedition were constantly and freely canvassed, and plans laid for carrying out the same. Their purpose was to incite mobs in the cities; to raise a revolution in the North, if possible, and thereby create a diversion in favor of Gen. Lee and the Southern army. Vallandigham was the acknowledged head or chief, and all the arrangements were made under his immediate supervision. He arranged everything and ordered everything, and was clearly the moving lever in the whole affair, having come direct from Richmond, by the way of Wilmington, for the express purpose of conducting it. I had several private chats with him in regard to the expedition. He said it was one of vital importance to the Confederacy, and was undertaken under the sanction and by authority of the Richmond Government; that he himself was at the head of it. I recollect particularly a conversation had with him sitting together on the bridge on the morning of the 28th of June, two days before we reached Halifax. He spoke of the dangers attending the enterprise, but said that once in Boston he should be safe, for he would then be among friends—men that he knew. He then showed me his letter of authority under which he was acting, and which gave him the supervision of the whole affair. It was addressed to C. L. Vallandigham, and signed by Mr Mallory."

It would be interesting to know whether the Democracy of the IIId Ohio District nominated Vallandigham for Congress on this part of his record or not. The fact thus apparent, that Vallandigham was instrumental as a Confederate agent in exciting the New-York riots, seems to explain his nomination of Gov. Seymour for President. The "friends" of Gov. Seymour were not only the "friends" but the agents of Vallandigham.

The Bonds And What We Got For Them.

We quote the annexed paragraph from the eloquent and powerful speech made by Hon. R. B. Carnahan, at Steubenville, on Saturday last:

It is said that full value was not paid for these bonds? What was given was accepted as full value, and in fact those sold in 1861 and in 1862 were purchased with coin or its equivalent. The war actually began in April, 1861. Until February, 1862, the paper currency was at par with gold. From that period until July, 1862, the premium on gold ranged from one to five per cent. From July 1861 to January 1863, the average premium was 20 per cent, but prices had not yet become inflated, and the paper currency was practically the equivalent of coin.

During these twenty-one months of the war a large portion of the bonds were sold including the $250,000,000 authorized by the act of 18th of July, 1861, and the $500,000,000 5-20's of February 25th, 1862. All of these were paid for in gold or its practical equivalent. In 1863 the average premium of gold was 45½ per cent, and in 1864 103½. Of course the loss in discount to the government was very great, or rather the loss of the citizen was great. But the act of Congress of March 3rd, 1864, authorizing the issue of $200,000,000 of bonds, called the 10-40s, specifically provides for their payment in coin. You will observe that the bonds issued when the "greenbacks" were at the lowest figure, are expressly made payable in coin. Does not this show that the United States intended to preclude any doubt as to how, and in what currency the bonds should be paid?

For the Argus.

European Correspondence.

London, August 10th, 1868.

An unprejudiced American, who has not come abroad with the determination to find nothing in English manners and customs equal to that which is to be found in his own country, will be greatly interested, and instructed, and find many things to admire among the different objects coming under his notice during a stay in England, and though there may be some things in which he may consider America to have the advantage, he will be forced to confess that in many, very many, things, we yet have to make considerable progress before we can hope to rival our cousins on this side of the water. Acknowledging this much, however, I think he will consider that in one particular, that of deference to the female sex, we are a step in advance of the residents of this older country; for in every instance coming under my observation thus far I have found women treated as though they were fully equal to take care of themselves, an left to do so. In public assemblages I have found this particularly the case, the weaker sex being pushed around and crowded upon in a manner quite unusual in our country, but, probably from being used to it, they seem quite able to take care of themselves. It was only a few days ago that I saw, in one of the most frequented streets, a man assault a woman, striking her repeatedly with his fists, while a crowd of great, burly Englishmen stood calmly by and witnessed the occurrence, without ever venturing to remark against it. Such a thing would not, I venture to say, be witnessed in any American city without the assaulting party receiving such punishment as he certainly richly deserved, at the hands of the observers, and it was with difficulty that I could keep from interfering, but being a small man and a stranger I thought it best to let the battle be decided as it might, and I preserved a strict neutrality, as did the valiant natives on this side when, a few years ago, there was war on our side of the water. In the matter of

RAILWAY AND RAILWAY STATIONS,

however, there is so much that is different from our own country that an American must needs notice it. The English railway carriage is generally divided into three compartments, completely separated from each other, with doors opening at each side, the compartments at each end, over the trucks, being mostly denominated second-class, and the centre compartment first-class. The second class compartments on some roads are better than on others, but generally are cushioned with leather, sufficiently high to enable the passenger to rest the head against the cushion, and with two benches arranged to accommodate eight persons, who sit facing each other. A lamp is suspended from the centre of the roof, and the only ventilation supplied by windows over the doors, which can be opened or closed at pleasure. Windows at the sides supply light, but cannot be opened. Racks are provided for small baggage, (or luggage, as it is called in this country,) and altogether, second-class accommodations are quite comfortable, unless the cars are very much crowded; but inconvenience from this cause is rare, as so many cars are generally provided. The first-class compartments, for the most part, accommodate six passengers, with seats the same as in the second-class, except that there is a division between the seats, similar to the arrangement on some of our own railways, and the upholstering is cloth or plush, the padding extending to the roof of the car. Somewhat more liberal accomodation is given for stowing away small luggage, and the floor mostly carpeted. The third-class carriage is generally seperate from the others, but in some instances one of the three compartments of the same carriage in which are the other two classes, and is, in internal arrangement, very much the same as the other classes, but without cushioning of any kind, or accommodations for luggage inside. The railways are built in the most substantial manner, with bridges and tunnels numerous, and built as though to last forever, and from this circumstance, and the manner in which the cars are coupled together, such jolting and bouncing as one experiences on our own roads is never to be thought of. Besides, there is great freedom from dust, the sides of embankments being sodded and in many cases planted with flowers, making the view pleasant indeed. Greater speed is achieved than would be thought of on our roads, the trains on the London and Northwestern Railway making the run from Liverpool to London, a distance of two hundred and twelve miles, in five hours, only stoping four times on the way. By a newly introduced arrangement, the engine is supplied with water without stopping, the device by which this is done being simply a long trough placed between the rails, into which a suction pipe from the engine is introduced as the train moves, and the supply of water taken. All railway stations are of the most substantial character, and some of them really handsome buildings, and arranged in every way to provide for the comfort of travelers, the system being so perfect that it is almost an impossibility for the traveler to commit an error in taking his train, everything being plainly lettered, and attentive, uniformed officials always on hand to give information. Refreshment saloons are generally to be found, where eatables of all kinds are to be had. The first, second and third class booking or ticket offices are in different parts of the building, and there is no unpleasant crowding in procuring tickets, and none but those who are holders of tickets are permitted near the cars, the tickets being examined on entering a gate when you take your train and given up at the depot when you leave the train. Everything is done upon the most perfect system, the advantages of which are most apparent to those who are unaccustomed to such accommodations. Every precaution is taken against accident, the roads being fenced in to prevent animals from obstructing the roadway, and the human species kept from walking the track by laws providing heavy fines for so doing, and also a fine for getting on or off a train when in motion. Every inducement is held out to induce travel, and at this season of the year particularly, excursion trains at reduced fares are run on nearly all railways, and the public made aware of the fact by most extensive advertising of it. In all parts of London and the adjacent country may be seen, on blank walls, fences, &c., huge posters with, "To Brighton and back every Sunday and Monday for three shillings," and "Nine hours at Brighton every Sunday and Monday for three shillings." The same announcement is to be seen staring you in the face from the tops of omnibuses, at railway stations, and in fact everywhere you happen to go. The public, seeing this so much, are not long in finding out that the London, Brighton and South Coast Railway will, on any Sunday or Monday, take you to Brighton, on the sea coast, about fifty miles from London, allow a stay of nine hours and furnish passage back to London, for three shillings, or about one dollar currency at present rates. As a consequence the trains are crowed and many of the poorer classes are enabled to indulge in a dip in the sea, possibly several times during the season, and the road derives a pecuniary benefit from it. So it is on all railway lines. Some interesting spot is made of easy and cheap access, and the fact made known, and crowds flock to it, both the railways and the people being the gainers thereby. Intimately connected with the railway system, is the one of the greatest boons to travelers to be found on this side of the water, and one which any American who has ever suffered (and who has not?) from the extravagant charges and extortion of hackney coach drivers in the principal cities of the United States will most fully appreciate. The cabs (all one-horse vehicles) have completely superceded hackney coaches in the "Great City" no two-horse vehicle of the kind being seen now. They are of two kinds, "Hansoms" and four-wheelers, the former (called after its inventor) having two large wheels, open in front, with an arrangement for closing at pleasure, seats for two and a seat for the driver perched up behind. The four-wheelers have two seats and two doors, and entirely closed, and carry four persons, while on top there is plenty of room for baggage. These vehicles ply for hire all over the city and are a great convenience in visiting the many objects of interest with which the city abounds; but it is at the railway station that the traveler most appreciates their service. The rates of fare are regulated by law, and at all railway stations a tariff of fares is kept posted with rates to different points, and the passenger has only to consult this, call his cab and be driven to his destination at a cost of a six pence per mile for one or two persons and a sixpence additional for each extra passenger. A reasonable amount of baggage will be carried free. Cab drivers seldom exact more than the proper fare, but I fancy few Americans who come over to this side would grumble if twice the regular fare was collected, so accustomed are they to high prices at home. In nearly all the large cities the cab system exists, and is found so satisfactory that it seems very singular that some enterprising Yankee has not attempted the introduction of the article into the principal cities of the United States at least. There is a prejudice in our country against one-horse vehicles, I am aware, and it is certain that the "wear and tear" of horses, flesh and vehicles would be greater than here, owing to our rough streets, but then if London cabs are profitable at the prices charged here they would be profitable at home at an advance of fifty per cent., which would still be much below what we now have to pay.

I have said this much of cabs and railways, noticing the favorable aspects, but I do not wish it to be understood that I consider English railways or railway carriages ahead of those at home, in every particular, but on the contrary I am disposed to think that there are some things that could be adopted here with considerable advantage to all parties concerned. Among these one of the most important is a cabin on the locomotive, for the protection of the engineer, for on all the engines used here he has to stand exposed to the weather, no matter what the nature of it is. To the suggestion that a change in this respect would be beneficial you will receive answer that the climate here is such that such a protection as our engineers enjoy is quite unnecessary, the summer weather not being so extremely warm, nor the winter so very cold as with us; but as the inhabitants of this section have been treated to some very warm weather this season, (the thermometer on several occasions reaching 180 in the sun, a degree of heat quite unusual in this country,) they may have reason to modify their opinions. Another advantage we possess is the bell-rope, enabling any person to communicate with the engineer upon occasions where it may be necessary at the instant. Strange as it may seem, so opposed are the English to anything new, that they steadily refuse to adopt so simple a means of preventing trouble or of furnishing aid in time of trouble, and, and as yet the only means of communication with the guard is at stations, which, on express trains, are few and far between. Another advantage we claim is one affecting the health of every railway passenger, and that is the water closets which are connected with nearly every first-class car on American roads. No such thing is yet to be found in this country, and, like communication with the guard, nature must only receive attention at regular stations, which is very inconvenient. To the two last suggestions of improvement, I have found no one who can give any reason why they should not be adopted, except in the latter case the construction of the cars would prevent it. This may the case, and it would be quite impossible to alter the present arrangement of the cars you know.

However, there are many things which will give pleasure to an American in traveling on English railways, and which he would, if an unprejudiced man, freely say could be adopted at home, and the change be for the better, and from observation at home I think the day is not far distant when we shall have a most perfect system, for we are a progressive people, while those on this side are content to move along in the same channel their forefathers moved in, unable to discover when a change for the better can be made.

The people generally are beginning to appreciate "the States," as they are called, and on every hand expressions of good feeling are quite common, all of which we must take to be sincere until the contrary be proven.

WEATHER AND CROPS.

I remarked above that there had been some particular warm weather experienced here this season, in fact, so warm a summer has not been known within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. No rain of any consequence has fallen for several months, and all over the land evidence is given by the parched up appearance of everything that rain is very greatly needed. "The green fields of Merry England" are this season not to be seen, and the beauty of the landscape suffers thereby. Notwithstanding the dry weather good crops of grain are said to be expected, but roots of all kinds will yield but poorly. Butter and cheese are advancing daily, and vegetables, &c., higher than for many seasons past.

"A White Man's Government."

For an example of the mode in which the Southern Democracy occasionally vary their occupation in shooting "Radical niggers," by trying to coax them to become "colored Democrats," we submit the annexed catechism, which has been prepared for the use of the Virginia freedmen by the Richmond Whig, one of the leading Democratic rebel journals of the South. It covers the whole ground, with more than usual fidelity to the truth, and makes very fair reading for the Democrats hereabouts, who believe in "a white man's government." The Whig says;

Who gave the negroes the right of sufferage in New York? The Democratic party.

Who presided over the Convention which gave this privilege to negroes? Martin Van Buren, a Democrat.

Who afterwards elected Martin Van Buren President of the United States? The Democratic party.

Who married a negro woman and by her had mulatto children? Richard M. Johnson, a good Democrat.

Who elected Richard M. Johnson Vice President of the United States? The Democratic party.

If President Van Buren had died, and Richard M. Johnson had become President who would have become the Democratic mistress of the White House? This negro woman.

Who made the negro a citizen of the State of Maine? The Democratic party

Who enacted a similar law in Massachusetts? The Democratic party.

Who gave the negro a right to vote in New-Hampshire? The Democratic party.

Who permitted every colored person owning $250 in New York to become a voter? General Assembly purely Democratic.

Who repealed the laws of Ohio which required negroes to give bonds and security before settling in that State? The Democratic party.

Who made mulattoes legal voters in Ohio? A Democratic Supreme Court, of which Reuben Wood was Chief Justice.

What became of Reuben Wood? The Democratic party elected him Governor three times.

Who helped to give free negroes the right to vote in Tennessee under the Constitution of 1797? Gen. Jackson.

Was General Jackson a good Democrat? He generally passed as such.

A. R. Moore, Esq., temporarily in the oil regions of this State, has our thanks for several Tidiout and Warren papers.

Mr. Wm. Smith of Washington Penn'a., lately told a young man in his employ to grease the wagon. He did grease it, and grease it effectually—tongue, axles, bed and cushions.

Our Thanks are due Henry Goehring, Esq., of New Sewickly township, for a basket of ripe apples.—They were of the "July sweets" variety, and decidedly pleasant "to take."

At a late Republican procession in Washington county, the Democrats threw stones at and otherwise harrassed the rear of the column. We are not surprised at this. It is just what they were employed in during the war.

A Straw.—A vote was taken last week on the steamer running from Baltimore to Washington, filled with the men bound for the scene of the prize fight between Collyer and Edwards. Here is the result:—Seymour 98; Grant 4. Rough, isn't it?

Dr. Johnson said, "Young Man! study while you are young." We advise all young persons to get an education. You can get more for your time and money at the State Normal School at Edinboro than at any other institution known to us.

Teacher Selected.—Miss Clara Donahoo of Beaver was selected on last Friday Evening by the school directors of this place, to take charge of room No. 3 in our public school, for the remainder of the present school year. School opened on last Monday, under favorable auspices.

Crawford, the confederate nominee for Congress, went south to aid the rebels. He was an open secessionist during the war. His friends never denied it and he does not deny it now. A Knight of the Golden Circle would make a fine representative in Congress from the loyal 24th District!—Washington Reporter.

Hopewell Tp.—The Republicans of Hopewell township, this county, held a meeting at New Sheffield on last Monday night. Messrs. Eberhart and [illegible] were selected as the speakers. We have not heard the particulars of the meeting but have scarcely a doubt but that it was a success, as there is no discount on the Hopewell Republicans.

Serious Accident.—On Tuesday evening last, while Mary Hopkins was crossing the race on a plank at the paper mill above Beaver Falls, she slipped, and fell the distance of 15 feet and broke her collar bone, sprained her wrist, and bruised herself considerably. A physician was called in, and she is now recovering slowly.

Our Widows and Orphans.—The incomes of the widows and orphans who are pensioned because their husbands or fathers were killed by the rebels, depend upon the credit of the Government. The Democracy advocate practical repudiation, which will destroy this credit. The rebels would rejoice to beggar the survivors of those whom they starved in prison.

Editor of The Beaver Argus:

I notice improvements in the streets of Bridgewater and Rochester, which will add much to the comfort of travelers in both places. It would be pleasant should the same spirit seize our council. We are sadly in need of side walks in this borough. It would be advisable to pass an ordinance compelling people to pave their property, would it not? CITIZEN.

Personal.—Dr. F. F. Davis, of Oil City, and the genial editor of the Oil City Republican was in town last week on a visit to some relatives residing in this vicinity. He reports the Republican fires to be burning brightly in Venango county, and claims that that county will give a heavier majority for our ticket this year than it ever did before. We are glad to learn that the Dr. is doing a good business in the oil regions.—He deserves success and is receiving it.

OHIO TOWNSHIP, BEAVER CO., PA.,
August 28th, 1868.

Editor of The Beaver Argus:

When Mr. Crawford, the Democratic candidate for Congress, and his Beaver town friends come out here again to speak to the wind, as they did on last Monday night, please tell them to keep their whisky bottle a little more private when they are about our wells.—We don't want our children to see the "critter," much less learn to imbibe the ugly stuff. So asks one, who was THERE.

Had his Jaw Broken.—On last Sunday a man named John Flannery was discovered on the outskirts of Beaver, with his under jaw broken, and a number of other severe bruises on the head and neck. He represents that in a fight the night before at Beaver Falls some one used a slung-shot on him and damaged him to the above extent. He lives in or near Industry, this county. His clothes being very bloody, a change of linen was provided, and in the evening he left for his home, at the town above named. He could not give the name of his assailant.

Chippewa Tp.—The Republicans of Chippewa township held a large and enthusiastic meeting at Dunlap's School House, on last Saturday evening.—Large delegations were in attendance from New Brighton and Beaver Falls. Wm. Thomas, Esq., presided. Messrs. Eberhart, Morlan, and Metzgar, all of New Brighton and vicinity, delivered the addresses, which were well received by those present. Chippewa is beginning to wake up to the fact that if we want peace we must elect Grant and Colfax; or, if it is another war we are after, then Seymour and Blair should be our choice.

BLACKHAWK, PA., Aug. 29th, 1868.

Editor Argus: I am informed that the Democrats of Beaver and vicinity have caused a report to be circulated to the effect that I have abandoned the Republican party, and intend supporting their ticket at the fall elections. Allow me to say that all this is false. I am as thorough a Republican now as I ever was in my life, and I never had and have not now the slightest intention of ever supporting a party that is managed and controlled by those who either fought against the country openly or secretly during the rebellion. I shall therefore vote this year as I always have voted heretofore—for the whole Republican ticket, from President down to Trustee of the Academy.

ISAIAH MORGAN.

Editor of The Beaver Argus:

At a Seymour and Blair meeting held not 5 miles from the Court House, on Saturday evening, after Mr. Crawford had finished his speech the venerable President arose and proposed three cheers for Seymour & Grant. A few sickly, weak cheers went up for Seymour from the aliens, women, and children and a few men, but the cheers for Grant from the hard fisted noble men, were given with a will, and were such as made the welkin ring. The Democracy felt very, very much chagrined to think the venerable Chairman, who has stood the storms of 60 years, and been true to the faith, should show such symptoms of his desire to see the great Captain elected President of the United States. FREEDOM.

The Great American Hair Preparation, valued at home and abroad, a real Hair Restorer or Dressing (in one bottle.) A great triumph of science. MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S IMPROVED, (new style.) Every Druggist sells it. Price, one Dollar. [aug26'68:4t.

[illegible]

'Tis all up with me now,
My race is almost run;
My friends may shout, and curse and pout,
But a victory can't be won.
Grant will win the day,
The people are with him I know,
And all our lies and Frank Blair's [illegible]
Will only end in woe.

CHORUS.

Oh boys, carry me long
I'm spurned "by the boys in blue,"
They are joined in a band for Grant's the man,
And our pet nigger howl won't do.

Our country is sadly wrong,
'Tis united for Grant I'd vow,
In every place both small and great
They are bound to defeat me too;
The Soldiers are everywhere,
And they can't be gulled by lies,
They are up to snuff and will handle me rough,
So Blair it is no use to try.

CHORUS.

Oh boys, carry me long
I'm spurned "by the boys in blue,"
They are joined in a band for Grant's the man,
And our pet nigger howl won't do.

In every thing we've failed,
The people don't seem to be green,
The Greenback plan is all a sham,
And we have swallowed the scheme.
Our shrieks don't seem to take,
The masses don't mind them a bit,
And our nigger howl and traitorous scowl
Are but "a dead cock in the pit."

CHORUS.

Oh boys, carry me long
I'm spurned "by the boys in blue,"
They are joined in a band for Grant's the man,
And our pet nigger howl wont do.

I am sick and sorry and sore,
My heart is bursting with pain,
And the great Grant throng, with shout and song,
Will handle me roughly again;
Oh Policy! what shall I do?
Oh Blair I fear it is so;
With all our lies and shrieks and sighs,
I to Washington never can go.

Rochester Public School.—The addition to the Public School building in Rochester, is nearly complete. It consists of four rooms. The entire building as enlarged, will contain eight beautiful school rooms, four of which will be 24x44 and four 24x35 feet in size, and a hall through the house 9x34 feet. The enlargements and improvements will cost about four thousand (4,000) dollars, and when complete will be the best public school building in the county, and the largest but one. The contractors Messrs. Miller, Dobson & Trax, are entitled to much credit for their energy and promptness in pushing the work to completion in time for the fall term, which will commence on Monday, Sept. 7th, with Prof. J. J. Rockwell principal, and Misses Reno, Tucker, Gray, Moorhead and Decker, assistants.

It is very desirable that all who expect to attend the School should be present promptly at the commencement of the term. Parents and guardians cannot fail to see the importance of this request.

Beaver.—That the Republicans of Beaver county are keenly alive to the great issues of the hour, was amply evidenced by one of the largest political gatherings that ever assembled within its limits, on Friday evening, in the town of Beaver. The people turned out en masse and the meeting grew to such massive proportions that the commodious Court House was found entirely too small for the occasion, and an adjournment to the public grounds surrounding it was rendered necessary. Messrs. Donley and Thos. M. Marshall addressed the meeting. The latter made one of the most powerful speeches of the campaign, and though his remarks filled two hours and a half and extended beyond midnight, the meeting cried, "go on!" "go on!" as he concluded his speech. The Republicans of Beaver county will do their full duty at the approaching election.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

Information Wanted.—We have received the following from Hookstown, Pa.: On the 19th day of May, 1868, my husband, Daniel L. Crider, left home on business with the understanding that he would return in one week, but I have never heard of him since.—Mr. Crider's business was peddling notions and jewelry. He is thirty-six years of age, five feet ten inches high, slim and neatly formed, auburn hair, blue eyes, fair complexion and large whiskers. Three of his front teeth are out, and when he left home he wore a light gray suit. He is a fluent talker. Any person seeing this notice and can give any information in regard to my husband will confer a great favor on one that is left very destitute MALINDA CRIDER.

Hookstown, Beaver Co., Pa., August 24, 1868.

Letter List.—The following letters have remained in the Beaver Post office for one month, uncalled for:

Mrs Zilla A. Bunn, C. S. Buckler, Mr. James Buff (care of Jas. Lenherst), J. M. Burns, Esq.
Mrs. Mary A. Coon.
Mr. Presly Dunlap, Mr. A. A. Davidson.
Martin Foulier.
Marion Hull.
William Jordan.
Mrs. O. H. Luce 2.
Mr. R. H. Langdon.
R. Rothrock, Esq., Nancy Reed.
Mr. Allen Taylor 2.
Rev. Dr. Williams. M. A. McGAFFICK, P. M.
September 1st, 1868.

Republican Rally at Freedom.—The Republicans of Freedom Boro., met on Tuesday evening, Aug. 25th, and were organized by calling Mr. W. W. Kerr to the chair, who introduced J. F. Dravo, Esq., of Beaver. Mr. D. spoke for ¾ of an hour in a clear, concise, and vigorous manner. Compared the Chicago with the Tammany platform, and Grant and Colfax with Seymour and Blair. The Democrats who were present gave him credit, for at least being honest.—Mr. D. is a very argumentative speaker. Prof. G. L. Eberhart of New Brighton was next introduced, who spoke for 50 minutes, scathing cops—many of them went away sore, and didn't like the Prof. After a vote of thanks to the speakers, the meeting adjourned with cheers for Grant and Colfax. The only interruption was some copperhead boys with fife and drums from Rochester, who no doubt were sent here by older cops.

We met again on Friday evening Aug. 28th in the School Hall, and organized a Grant Club by the election of the following officers: President, T. G. Kerr, Esq.; Vice-Presidents, Jno. Paul, Esq.; Jas. Reed, Esq., David Jenkins and Capt. Jas. Bevington; Secretary, Chas. H. Bentel; Corresponding Sec'y., W. W. Kerr; Treasurer, P. Bentel; Executive committee, T. J. Thompson, Capt. A. McDonald, Alf. McCaskey, S. S. Morrison and Esq. Reed. For officers of the company: Capt., Alfred McCaskey; Lieut., Geo. McCaskey; Orderly Seargent, Jas. B. Cole; Ensign, Jno. Biggs. It was then resolved that we hold meetings on Friday evenings of every week. After the transaction of other business the club adjourned with three rousing cheers for the ticket. Expect a good account from Freedom and St. Clair when election days roll around. FREEDOM.

Editor of The Beaver Argus;

The Grant and Colfax club of Big Beaver Tp., meets every Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, at Homewood.—The officers are as follows: President, C. P. Wallace; Vice-Presidents, A. Hunter, R. S. Foster and F. F. Smith; Recording Secretary, J. W. Clabaugh; Corresponding Secretary, J. H. Wetherspoon; Treasurer, Frederick Graham; Vigilant Committee, J. C. Chapman, W. H. Wallace and Samuel C. Graham; Committee on arrangements to attend the Mass Meeting in Beaver, Robert Blair, S. E. Andrews, Charles Chapman, James Patterson, H. J. Marshall and John Aley. I think that we have the honor of raising the first Grant and Colfax Pole in the County, if not in the State.

Our Tp. has had the Boro. of New Gallice struck off since our last election, but we will still have 40 of a majority for our State & County ticket, and 50 for Grant & Colfax in November. Our soldiers are nearly all Republicans. Nine out of every ten will vote for Grant and Colfax. We have widows and orphans in our Tp. that are looking to the loyal people to see whether their claims will be turned over to Forest the Butcher or Wade Hampton.

Mr. Editor there was a solemn pledge given by the people when our soldiers left their families that if they fell in battle that their widows and children should be kindly cared for the question is shall we, as a loyal people, remain true to our promise by electing Grant and Colfax or shall we turn the reins of Government over to Forest, Hampton, Vallandigham and the pirate Semmes, as these Rebel gentlemen have been named as a Seymour cabinet.

There is certainly too much patriotism in our beloved country to suffer such a dreadful calamity to befall our Nation.

Big Beaver township was among the first to raise a Company for the three years service, Co. K. 10th Reserves, with the brave Capt. Miller at their head, who fell at the head of his company in the seven days fight before Richmond, where to-day his bones lay bleaching on that memorable battle-field. I could mention a score of incidents that would bring tears from many dear eyes in our township, but one more and I am done for the present. When the call was for nine months men we had a young man, the youngest son of one of our most respected citizens, who was too young to be mustered into the service without the consent of his parents. I remember of that noble young man pleading with his mother for her to intercede with his aged father to let him go; and when the father looked at his darling young boy and then at his bleeding country, he gave his consent. At the battle of Fredericksburg he was wounded in the right arm and returned with his company in the following May. Oh! how those aged parents rejoiced that their dear boy had returned to cheer them in their declining days. But when the next call came for more troops William said to his dear parents, "I must leave you again for a short time, my country calls me and I must go!" but at the battle of Coal Harbor he fell mortally wounded, and to-day fills a soldiers grave.

When I think of the Rebel that shot that young man, who to day is a warm supporter of Seymour, I can scarcely realize that any one claiming to be a lover of our Brave Soldiers could vote for Seymour and Blair. P.

THE CAMPAIGN.

A NEW Radical paper called The Weekly Times has been started in Petersburg, Va.

THE Union boys of St. Paul, Minn., had a glorious meeting on the 18th. Senator Ramsey and others made telling speeches.

The Raleigh (N. C.) Standard says that the Hon. Nat Boyden, Democratic Congressman from that State, will not support Seymour and Blair.

A GRANT and Colfax pole, 160 feet high, has been raised in Evansville, Ind. The Grant Guards held a grand jollification in honor of the event.

THE Republican State Central Committee of Iowa are making arrangements for two grand barbacues in each Congressional District in the State.

GEN. John M. Palmer addressed a tremendous Republican mass meeting at Terre Haute, Ind., on the 21st inst. A dispatch from there says that his speech will have great effect.

FIFTEEN hundred Republican voters raised a Grant and Colfax pole over 150 feet high, in Elizabeth, Harrison County, Ind., on the 20th inst. The boys out that way mean business.

KITTERY, Me., was alive with Republican enthusiasm on the 21st inst. The Hon. John Lynch spoke for an hour, and was followed by the Hon. E. A. Storrs of Chicago in an eloquent and powerful speech.

A GRAND Republican mass meeting was held at Skowhegan, Me., on the 20th inst. The Hon. James G. Blaine, ex-Senator Creswell of Md., Judge Kelly of Penn., and the Hon. Lot M. Morrell were the speakers.

A LARGE and enthusiastic Republican meeting was held at Janesville, Wis., on the 21st inst. Addresses were made by the Hon. C. G. Williams, and Col. McHenry. The campaign in Wisconsin is opened vigorously.

THE Republicans of New-Albany, Ind., had an old-fashioned "Tippecanoe" rally on the 20th inst. Col. Wilson and others addressed an immense crowd.—The boys are making a square stand-up fight, and mean to rescue the city from Democratic misrule.

THE Hon. George W. Woodward was in Susquehanna County, the other day. On the train to Scranton a vote was taken, resulting in 43 for Grant, to 21 for Seymour. Judge Woodward was not satisfied, when some one suggested to him "to try the gravel train."

THE Tanners of Omaha, Neb., carry the old battle-flag of the First Nebraska Cavalry, which bears the following honors: "Milford," "Donelson," "Shiloh," "Corinth," "Cape Girardeau," "Chalk Bluff," "Sylla-more," "Redbank," "Jacksonport," and "Clarendon." It is riddled with bullet-holes.

FIVE thousand freemen held a glorious Republican ratification meeting on the bluffs at Memphis, Tenn., on the 20th inst. Intense enthusiasm was manifested. The colored voters were present in force. Speeches were made by Gen. W. J. Smith, Col. W. H. Wood, Col. H. E. Hudson, and the Hon. Barbour Lewis.

AN immense Republican mass meeting was held at Allentown, Pa., on the afternoon and evening of the 22d. Cols. John W. Forney and James Worrell gave the Copperheads a lively turning, to the intense delight of loyal thousands. The whole population seemed to be out, men, women and children. It is conceded that no more effective meeting was ever held in Allentown.

THE Hon. John A. Kasson, has consented to take the stump for the campaign in Iowa, and a list of appointments has been announced for him, beginning at Mount Pleasant on the 20th. From there he will work toward Northern Iowa, speaking at Dubuque, Nashua, McGregor, Cedar Falls, and other points. Mr. Kasson has no superior as a speaker in the State, and will do brilliant service for the ticket.

The Providence Press says: Mr David Makepeace of Norton, Mass., will be 101 years old in the month of September next. He still does work on his farm, and last July mowed on a wager against a gentleman of 87 years of age, beating him about a rod. He has voted for every President of the United States, and intends to vote for Grant and Colfax at the coming election.—He voted for Gen. Washington at his second term of office, and remembers many incidents connected with our war of independence.

SATURDAY, the 15th, was a gala day for the Republicans of Brownstown, Ind. The whole country thereabouts was emptied into Brownstown. Gen. Kimbal and Will. Cumback walked into the Rebel Democracy in a style that excited the utmost enthusiasm. The procession was led by 150 young ladies and gentlemen in uniform of red, white, and blue, and following them the several township delegations, making a procession of more than one-half mile long with banners flying, music, song and shouting along the line. The Democrats looked as if they had lost their mothers.

A GENTLEMAN who went over the Erie Road to New York a few days since relates the following: "In the smoking car a political discussion arose. Among those present were some 12 or 15 Jewish merchants from Cincinnati. All of these but a single one pronounced themselves strongly for Grant, and one proposed taking a vote in the car, which was done, and resulted, thirty for Grant and seven for Seymour.—He and the Seymour man, with a third to see fair play on both sides, then proceeded through the entire train and polled the passengers. The vote stood 27 for Seymour against 70 for Grant. The Republican Jews were immensely delighted and enthusiastic over the result.

AT the Democratic Convention at Lagrange, Kentucky, after several speeches, on attempting the organization, the Confederates were persistent in attempting to exclude certain Federal officers from taking part in the proceedings. Gen. Walter Whittaker, late of the Union army, made a vigorous protest, and on his claims being treated with contempt, made the following energetic speech:

"I here and now denounce and desert your party.—I cannot do justice to myself and the country and stay with such a corrupt party as you have become here to-day. You men who have fought in the Southern army come back here to-day with the blood boiling in your veins to exclude from your councils, me, who fought, and have the character of some bravery, to protect your homes and firesides, and who exerted himself in defense of the families of those who had left their homes. I am here and intend to be heard.

GEN. Carl Schurz has finished his tour in Indiana.—The Missouri Democrat says: "He gives a very encouraging account of things there. In the close and Democratic Counties and Districts, our friends are thoroughly alive and hard at work, and are everywhere gaining. The strong Republican Counties and Districts are less fully aroused, and, assured of success in their local tickets, they do not yet feel the importance of swelling the majority for the State ticket as far as possible, but he believes that this over-confidence will be supplanted by thorough and determined zeal as the last month of the canvass opens. The large gains already apparent, give strong ground for belief that the State can be carried by faithful effort. From the Indiana papers we have learned that Gen. Schurz has been very warmly received, that the Germans have gathered in great numbers to hear him, and that his speeches have given very great aid to the cause."

A Hint to Ladies.—It is a distinguished characteristic of a cultivated woman to adorn and beautify her person. In proportion as she becomes refined or debased, she pays more or less regard to her personal appearance. The love of admiration is, as it ought to be, strong in every woman's nature, and hence it is that the decoration of her person is always regarded as of paramount importance. The three most beautiful things on earth are women, children and flowers—each equally by nature pure and attractive. Woman knows she is beautiful, she loves to be admired by man; endeavors to render herself as attractive as possible to man's eyes, and therefore it is that she avails herself of all the benefits of dress and ornaments. Woman is gifted by nature with great natural attractions. Her complexion is, if not ruined by paint and powder, fair and delicate, her hair abundant and lustrous, and her form the very perfection of grace and loveliness. Woman's chief ornament is her hair. No matter how regular the contour of the features may be—how lustrous the eye—how sweet the voice or graceful the form, if the hair be not soft, glossy and beautiful, the chief attraction is wanting. A lady remarkable for the beauty of her hair, remarked in our hearing, the other day, that she owed to the moderate and constant use of "Barrett's Hair Restorative" a deep obligation, for by it she had become locally famous for the abundance and lustre of her hair.—Using it constantly ourselves we can add our testimony that as a dressing and restorative combined Barrett's is superior to any Hair Preparation we have ever used. It is reasonable in price, too, costing only one dollar for a large bottle full of the mixture.—Cincinnati Sunday Globe.

Laying A Corner Stone.—We are requested to state that the corner stone of the German Evangelical Luthern St. Paul's Church, of Rochester, this county, will be laid on the 10th of September, at 2 P. M.

All friends of christianity are respectfully invited to be present on the occasion.

"MONITOR LIME KILN."

One trial will convince any one that it is the best LIME ever burned in this vicinity, is at least 20 per cent better than Lime burned the old way, and will be sold at the same price. Come and see it and try some of it before making contracts, and save

TIME AND MONEY.

The coal is not mixed with the stone to burn it, so that it is entirely free from cinders and ashes, and we burn nothing but the best stone. Brick layers need not rub it off or sift it to make their mortar, for they get nothing but lime, as we draw every four hours; you can always get it

FRESH.

LIME delivered promptly whenever ordered by wagon load, car load, or in the barrel. Send orders to W. J. Dunn, Beaver, P. O., or to the "Mulvanch Lime Kiln's," Vanport, Beaver county.

Scouring, Drying and Pressing

THE UNDERSIGNED HAS TAKEN OUT PATents for Scouring, Drying and Pressing clothing, which for excellence of workmanship and speed, exceed anything now in use. Clothing cleansed to order in first class style. Work will be taken in at my place of business in Bridgewater, at all times, and renovated with but little delay to the owner.

I am still Agent for Howe's latest improved Sewing Machines, and also Singer's, both of which are growing more and more in favor, the longer they are used.

To the Public.

WE, THE UNDERSIGNED, HAVING SEEN the PRIZE CHURN, patented July 31, 1866, and Oct. 8, 1867, by the Prize Churn Company, Springfield, Vermont, and being satisfied that it does its work well, making good nice butter in from 2 to 8 minutes, we recommend it to all as the best Churn in market, to our knowledge.

GEO. W. HAMILTON,
D. McKINNEY, Jr.
N. WEYAND,
[illegible] WEYAND.

BEAVER, Aug. 2, 1868.

MR. CUNDALL churned for me this morning with his prize churn, he used no hot water or other unusual means of hastening the butter. In three minutes the butter began coming and in about five was ready to take out. Most patent churns are objectionable because so complicated that it requires more time to wash them than it does to churn the butter. This one can be cleaned in less time than the old fashioned dash churn. I regard it as a great improvement, and calculated to save woman much labor.

Also, Stoves, Grate Fronts, Grate Bars, Linen Sash Weights, Hollow Ware, Kettles, Iron Fence, and all other Castings called for, on short notice and of the very best metal.

Also, J. J. Anderson's justly celebrated New Cook Stove for Coal and Wood, which took the

First Premium

At the State Fair recently held at Pittsburgh. This Stove combines many new and important principles which place it far in advance of all others now in use. Some of the merits claimed for it by the Inventor, are Heavy Metal, Well Proportioned, Beauty of Style and Finish, Ease of Draft, Easily Kept Clean, Requires but little Fuel, and the

BEST BAKER EXTANT.

All orders thankfully received and promptly filled.

We Call Attention to the Following Statements:

While living in the East I used several of the most Celebrated Cooking Stoves made in that part of the country, and on my arrival here, I was recommended to purchase the Crystal Palace Stove, (also invented by Mr. Anderson) as being the best. I did so, and used it with good satisfaction. When I saw Mr. Anderson's new Stove, I was attracted by its neat appearance, and on examining its Oven and interior arrangements, found it possessed many advantages over all I had seen. I purchased, and have one now in use. We consider it superior to any we have ever used. It is all the inventor claims, and we think, all that could be desired in a Cooking Stove.

CAPT. GILBERT PENDLETON.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 21st.

Having one of Mr. Anderson's new Stoves in use, I can fully endorse Capt. Pendleton's statement.

JOHN H. WHISLER.

Having one of Anderson's new Stoves in use, I can fully endorse the above recommendation.

J. WOODRUFF.

Having one of Mr. Anderson's new Stoves in use, we are fully satisfied with its good qualities in all respects.

JOSEPH IRVIN AND WIFE.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 25th.

Having kept house for a long time, and used a great number of Cook Stoves of different patterns and styles, I consider J. J. Anderson's new Stove, in point of economy in fuel, ready cooking and baking for its size, superior to any we have used, and cheerfully recommend it, believing it will render entire satisfaction.

CHAS. LUKINS.

We have one of Mr. J. J. Anderson's new Stoves, manufactured at the Rochester Foundry, and having given it a fair trial, we find it comes fully up to all that has been claimed for it. It heats very rapidly, takes but little fuel, and is a most excellent baker. Mr. Anderson may congratulate himself on having achieved quite a triumph in the line of Cooking Stoves.

Very respectfully,

Beaver, Nov. 23d, 1867. J. S. BRACKEN.

MANUFACTURERS OF AND WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALERS IN

COOKING STOVES,
HEATING STOVES
GRATE FRONTS and
FENDERS, &c., &c.

Ruby Cooking Stove Nos. 7, 8 & 9.

THIS STOVE TOOK THE FIRST PREMIUM AT the State Fair as a Coal Cooking Stove, and also at the late County Fair. We use no scrap iron in their manufacture, but make them exclusively of No. 1 Pig Metal, and warrant them in every respect.

The Ruby has the largest oven in the market and consumes but little fuel in baking, owing to our improved Grate.

GRATE FRONTS AND FENDERS.

We are largely engaged in the manufacture of Grate Fronts and Fenders, which we enamel in an oven common, second quality and fine finish. This enamel retains its lustre for a long time, will not burn off, and makes a much superior finish to that of Coal Tar.

SUMMER PIECES.

We are also making Sheet Iron Summer Pieces (for which we have applied for a patent) pressed up in a Hydraulic press. They are much lighter than cast Iron, and much cheaper.

HEATING STOVES.

We claim the heaviest heating Stove in the market for the size, and use the best Stock in their construction.

Our patterns are not yet complete, but it is our intention to keep a general assortment in our line.

We also took the Premium at the County Fair for Castings generally, and we have entered in to the business with the determination to use the best of Pig Metal and make good work.

We respectfully request a share of the public patronage, and would be pleased to see those wanting anything in our line at our works.

Prices Low to suit the times.
